1. SIGNAGE. One note for your information regarding the signage language included on page 7 of the narrative as it relates to the Planning Commission's authority to review signs for approval that are non-compliant with the sign standards of the UDO. Please be aware that the Planning Commission only has the authority to consider and approve applications for permanent signage that exceed the maximum number of signs, maximum sign area or maximum height. Relief from any other sign ordinance requirement outside of these three areas to whom the Planning Commission has explicitly been granted authority over shall require going through the preliminary development plan public hearing process before both the Planning Commission and City Council.

This comment is for informational purposes only, to provide clarity on process should a future tenant choose to seek relief from any sign ordinance requirement.
